Thought and Nursing languages in social context

Nursing Department

GENERAL DESCRIPTION

The Thought and nursing languages in social context research group was born with a vocation to deepen the research in thought and science through taxonomies and own languages, which has been given in denominator Nurse Methodology. It is a research field that is starting, although it is taking a lot of interest quickly, both nationally and internationally.

More specifically, the aim is to work on the social and cultural aspects associated with Nursing Diagnoses, Interventions and Outcomes. From this point of view we also work on lines of Anthropology of Health, Socio-health Intervention in Environments of Cultural Diversity and Philosophy of Care. We therefore fit into the area of socio-health research

That is why in the profiles of its members, in addition to being nurses, is added in some of them to be graduates in Social and Cultural Anthropology, which provides suitability and coherence to the group and the lines.
